Ron:

There will be a NEW Mutual Assistance section of CAS:

Mutual Assistance becomes part of the top nav. Here's a simplified look at the Mutual Assistance section:

Top Nav: Add Mutual Assistance

Link to Head Page: H1 title on page: The Practice of Mutual Assistance

Three links to three separate pages:

The Practice of Mutual Assistance Booklet
Online and PDF

The Practice of Mutual Assistance Book
Online and PDF

Movement Continuity Instrument MCI
Begin the questions
Download the Quick Start

Head Page Behavior

Each of the three images should link to its respective destination page. The title of each offering should also be clickable for accessibility and clarity.

Do not number the three offerings or imply a required sequence. Each should function as an independent aperture into Mutual Assistance.

Keep the head page intentionally sparse. No additional history or explanation of PMA is needed.

Each destination page should include an unobtrusive return link near the top:

← Back to Mutual Assistance

Head Page Content:

The Practice of Mutual Assistance

Mutual Assistance is a relational practice for differentiated participants learning how to become useful to relation without surrendering sovereignty, discernment, or difference.

It can be entered through practice, explored through its deeper relational architecture, or observed through the movements that become recognizable in locality.

Presence — The Booklet
An Invitation to Relational Practice

The sleeping-whale image.

(Description:)

A brief invitation into the Practice of Mutual Assistance. Begin with a simple orientation, bring it into an actual relationship, and notice what becomes available for discernment, participation, consequence, and Return.

Movement — The Full Manuscript
A Relational Ecology for a More Inhabitable World

The descending-whale image.

(Description:)

A deeper exploration of the relational architecture beneath Mutual Assistance: sovereignty, difference, consequence, continuity, correspondence, Return, behavioral wisdom, and the widening from differentiated participants toward mutual locality.

Trace — The Movement Continuity Instrument
MCI v0.1

The trace image.

(Description:)

An observational instrument for noticing movements that become recognizable in you under different relational conditions. MCI does not score coherence or prescribe better responses. It makes participation observable—and, through Return, allows observation to acquire continuity.

And yes: clicking anywhere on the image enters that aperture. I'd probably make the title clickable too for accessibility and obviousness.

Then every destination page begins unobtrusively with:

← Back to Mutual Assistance

Destination Pages

Each offering should have its own page rather than linking directly from the Mutual Assistance head page to a PDF or instrument.

Booklet: Cover image + content online and option to download PDF

Full Manuscript: Cover image + content online and option to download PDF

MCI: brief existing orientation + Begin Observation as primary action + Quick Start as secondary option.

All three pages include ← Back to Mutual Assistance near the top.

MCI Quick Start

(Note for Ron: MCI Quick Start is a guide. It would be offered on the MCI head page where the instrument itself resides.)

It’s a short 3-page MCI Quick Start that will be available as optional context from the MCI page.

It should be presented as a secondary option rather than a prerequisite to participation.

The primary action remains:

Begin Observation

Secondary action:

MCI Quick Start

Read / Download Quick Start

The existing MCI orientation should remain short and unchanged so a visitor can begin immediately without reading additional material.

This is the content for the Quick Start page.

The Quick Start provides context about what kind of instrument MCI is, what happens during a sitting, why continuity matters, and how MCI relates to the larger Mutual Assistance ecology.

Reading the Quick Start is not required before participating.

They can read online or download PDF.